

DR. ASHLEY ESAREY
Professor, Whitman College

Ashley Esarey was a Postdoctoral Fellow at Harvard's Fairbank Center for Chinese Studies in 2009 and now teaches courses about Asian politics, international relations, and political communication at Whitman College in Washington State. He also serves as Associate in Research at Harvard University and Visiting Scholar at the University of Washington's Jackson School of International Studies.

His publications and research concern perceptions of Chinese propaganda, state control of information in the People's Republic, and the impact of digital forms of communication on Chinese politics. He is writing a book provisionally entitled, Media and Power in China.

Esarey majored in Diplomacy and World Affairs at Occidental College in Los Angeles and studied Japanese at Waseda University in Tokyo, prior to receiving Chinese-language training at Taiwan Normal University in Taipei. A former broadcast journalist, he received his PhD degree in political science from Columbia University in New York. As recipient of the Fulbright-Hays Fellowship, Esarey conducted extensive research on media in Beijing, Shanghai, and Guangzhou.

Esarey has spoken before the US-China Economic and Security Review Commission and the Congressional Executive Commission on China, the Council on Foreign Relations, and the National Committee on US-China Relations, and given numerous interviews to media, including the Associated Press, MSNBC, Voice of America, and the Chicago Tribune.
