

Anthony Saich
Director, Ash Center for Democratic Governance and Innovation and Daewoo Professor of International Affairs, Harvard University

Anthony Saich is the director of the Ash Center for Democratic Governance and Innovation and Daewoo Professor of International Affairs, the director of the Rajawali Foundation Institute for Asia and the faculty chair of the China Programs, the Asia Energy Leaders Program and the Leadership Transformation in Indonesia Program, which provide training programs for national and local Chinese and Indonesian officials. Currently, he is a guest professor at the School of Public Policy and Management at Tsinghua University, China. He also advises a wide range of government, private, and nonprofit organizations on work in China and elsewhere in Asia.

His current research focuses on politics and governance in post-Mao China, China's urbanization and rural-urban inequality in China; and the interplay between state and society in Asia and the respective roles they play in the provision of public goods and services at the local level. His most recent books include Governance and Politics of China (Fourth Edition, 2015); Chinese Village, Global Market (2012); Providing Public Goods in Transitional China (2008); Revolutionary Discourse in Mao's Republic (with David Apter, 1998); The Rise to Power of the Chinese Communist Party (1996); and China's Science Policy in the 80s (1989). His edited volumes include Political Governance in China, 2015, Philanthropy for Health in China (with Jennifer Ryan and Lincoln Chen, 2014), China Urbanizes: Consequences, Strategies, and Policies (with Shahid Yusuf, 2008), Introduction: AIDS and Social Policy in China (with Joan Kaufman and Arthur Kleinman, 2006), and the Reform of China's Financial Sector (with Yasheng Huang and Edward Steinfeld, 2005).
