Emily Weinstein

Research Analyst, Georgetown's Center for Security and Emerging Technology

Emily Weinstein is a Research Analyst at Georgetown's Center for Security and Emerging Technology (CSET), focused on Chinese innovation and domestic S&T policies and development. Before joining CSET, Emily was an Analyst at Pointe Bello, a strategic intelligence firm, where she conducted research on Chinese domestic and foreign policy. Independently, Emily has contributed to research projects at the Australian Strategic Policy Institute, including the China Defence Universities Tracker and the March 2020 "Uyghurs for sale" report. Her writing has appeared in the University of Nottingham's Asia Dialogue, the Global Taiwan Brief, Jamestown Foundation's China Brief, and the Project 2049 Institute's Asia Eye Blog. Emily holds an M.A. in Security Studies from Georgetown University and a B.A. in Asian Studies from the University of Michigan.

Ms. Weinstein has not previously testified before the Commission.