

Tamar Groswald Ozery, S.J.D.
Academic Fellow, Program on Corporate Governance, Harvard Law School

Tamar Groswald Ozery is an Academic Fellow at the Harvard Law School Program on Corporate Governance and an affiliated scholar with the East Asian Legal Studies Program at Harvard Law. Previously at Harvard, Dr. Groswald Ozery was a Teaching Fellow (comparative corporate governance) and served as editor of the Harvard Law School Forum on Corporate Governance.

A legal sinologist, Dr. Groswald Ozery's research examines the relationships between law, politics, and market development in contemporary China, with a focus on the development of corporations and capital markets. Her articles were published or are forthcoming in leading international law and comparative law journals, including The American Journal of Comparative Law, The University of Pennsylvania Journal of International Law, and Columbia Journal of Asian Law. She is now completing a book manuscript that analyzes the legal and political economic constructs of China's corporate development and global financial integration.

Prior to academia, Dr. Groswald Ozery worked in legal practice and spearheaded the China department of GKH Law Offices, a leading Israeli law firm, while residing in Israel and China [seconded at King & Wood Mallesons, Shanghai (金杜律师事务所)].

Dr. Groswald Ozery received her doctoral and master's degrees in law (S.J.D., LL.M.) from the University of Michigan where she was a Michigan Law Grotius Fellow and a Graduate Affiliate with the Lieberthal-Rogel Center for Chinese Studies. She received a BA in Asia Studies, and a Bachelor of Laws (LL.B.) degree (both magna cum laude) from The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel, where she teaches courses on Chinese law, governance, and market development as an adjunct professor and will be joining as full-time faculty in summer 2021.

Dr. Groswald Ozery has not previously testified before the Commission.