

Shaswat Das
Counsel, King & Spalding

Shas Das currently serves as a counsel at King & Spalding law firm, where among other areas he advises clients on compliance with U.S. economic/trade sanctions, anti-money laundering requirements, as well as federal securities and banking laws/regulations. Previously, Shas had a long career in U.S. government and quasi-government agencies where he held numerous senior level positions. As an Associate Director at the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, Shas negotiated numerous bilateral agreements with foreign regulators providing for cross-border audit oversight and represented the PCAOB in meetings with international audit standard setters. He also participated in a short term secondment at the OECD, assisting its Corporate Affairs Division in updating its Principles of Corporate Governance (adopted by the G-20). Earlier in his career, as counsel in the Banking Supervision and Regulation Division of the Federal Reserve Board, Shas was one of the lead lawyers on a seminal enforcement action brought against a global financial institution for violations of OFAC sanctions as well as deficiencies in its anti-money laundering program.

Mr. Das previously testified at the Commission's 2017 Hearing on Chinese Investment in the United States: Impacts and Issues for Policymakers.
