

Neil Thomas
Analyst, China and Northeast Asia, Eurasia Group

Neil Thomas is the lead analyst on Chinese elite politics, foreign policy, and international relations for Eurasia Group, the political risk advisory and consulting firm. Prior to joining Eurasia Group, he was a senior research associate at MacroPolo, the in-house think tank of the Paulson Institute, and a lecturer at the University of Chicago's Harris School of Public Policy. Previously, he worked at the Australian National University and interned at the Carnegie-Tsinghua Center and Danwei Media.

His writing on China has appeared in publications including Foreign Policy, The Los Angeles Review of Books, The Lowy Interpreter, The Washington Post, and The Wire China. His views on China have been quoted by media outlets such as The Atlantic, Bloomberg News, The Economist, The Financial Times, The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, and The Washington Post.

He holds a master in public policy from the Harvard Kennedy School, where he was a Kennedy Fellow, and a bachelor of arts from the University of Western Australia, where he was a Fogarty Scholar. He also studied in China at Tsinghua University, Renmin University, and Zhejiang University.

Mr. Thomas has not previously testified before the Commission.