

Mark Dallas

International Affairs Fellow for Tenured International Relations Scholars, Council on Foreign Relations

Mark Dallas is an Associate Professor of Political Science and Asian Studies at Union College in New York, and Director of Asian Studies. He currently is Council on Foreign Affairs, International Affairs Fellow for Tenured International Relations Scholars (IAF-TIRS). His research is interdisciplinary, and focuses on global value chains, emerging technologies, China, industrial and technology policy, and their economic and security implications. To study these topics, his research uses a variety of large-scale databases, like high-frequency shipment trade data, firm-level and investment data, and detailed product and sub-system datasets. For more information on his current and past research, please see his website: <http://muse.union.edu/dallasm/>

Previously, he received full-year fellowships from Harvard's Fairbank Center for Chinese Studies, a Fulbright Fellowship, Harvard-Yenching Institute, National Security Education Program, Chiang Ching-Kuo Foundation, among others. As a post-doc or visiting professor, he has conducted year-long research projects at Harvard University, Peking University, George Washington University School of Business, and he was the Hallsworth Visiting Professor at the Global Development Institute at the University of Manchester in England. He received his Ph.D. in political science from the University of California, Berkeley, and his BA in philosophy from Princeton University, summa cum laude.

Dr. Dallas has not previously testified before the Commission.
