

Logan Wright

Partner and Director of China Markets Research at Rhodium Group

Dr. Logan Wright is a Partner at Rhodium Group and leads the firm's China Markets Research work. Logan is also a Senior Associate of the Trustee Chair in Chinese Business and Economics at the Center for Strategic and International Studies. Previously, Logan was head of China research for Medley Global Advisors and a China analyst with Stone & McCarthy Research Associates, both in Beijing.

Logan's research focuses on China's financial system and credit conditions in shaping outcomes within China's economy, as well as the policies of China's central bank. Logan and the China Markets Research team monitor China's real economic conditions, financial market developments, and future policy directions to gauge the influence of China's economy on global financial markets. He is also the author of three reports on China's financial system and the country's longer-term economic trajectory, Credit and Credibility (2018), The China Economic Risk Matrix (2020), and Grasping Shadows (2023).

Logan holds a Ph.D. from the George Washington University, where his dissertation concerned the political factors shaping the reform of China's exchange rate regime. He graduated with a Master's degree in Security Studies and a Bachelor's degree in Foreign Service from Georgetown University. He is based in Washington, DC, after living and working in Beijing and Hong Kong for over two decades.

Dr. Wright has not previously testified before the Commission.
