

Adam Wolfe
Emerging Markets Economist, Absolute Strategy Research

Adam Wolfe is the Emerging Markets Economist for Absolute Strategy Research, which has been the top-ranked Independent Macro Research Provider in Europe since 2013 according to the Institutional Investor All Europe Research Awards. Adam has covered China and emerging markets for more than 15 years. He previously held similar roles at the Macro Research Board and Roubini Global Economics. His views have been covered in the Financial Times, Wall Street Journal, The Economist, and other outlets. Adam co-authored a chapter in the Oxford Companion to the Economics of China with Nouriel Roubini on China's financial sector. He has an MA from New York University and a BA from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Mr. Wolfe testified before the Commission for the 2024 hearing on “Consumer Products from China: Safety, Regulations, and Supply Chains.”