

Mr. William Murray
U.S. Naval War College

William S. Murray is an associate research professor at the United States Naval War College. He joined the navy in 1983 immediately after graduating from the State University of New York at Buffalo with a B.S. in Electrical Engineering. Professor Murray served on, and qualified to command, nuclear powered submarines. In 1994 he received a Master of Arts degree from the United States Naval War College.

He is the co-editor of the books China's New Nuclear Submarine Force and China's Energy Strategy: The Impact on Beijing's Maritime Policies and has published articles in International Security and many other journals.