

Alanna Krolkowski
Princeton-Harvard China and the World Fellow
Fairbank Center for Chinese Studies
Harvard University

Alanna Krolkowski is a postdoctoral Princeton-Harvard China and the World Fellow at Harvard University's Fairbank Center for Chinese Studies. She is currently revising a book manuscript on China-U.S. trade and industrial collaboration in civil-commercial aircraft and spacecraft manufacture. This research is based on extensive Chinese-language field research that she conducted on site in China. Dr. Krolkowski has also shared the results of her research in journal articles, book chapters, testimony for the U.S. China Commission, research briefs, and conference presentations. Before obtaining her PhD in political science from the University of Toronto, Dr. Krolkowski completed a Bachelor of Arts in International Development and Political Science at McGill University.