

Lynette Ong

Associate Professor of Political Science, University of Toronto

Lynette Ong is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Toronto, jointly appointed by the Department of Political Science and the Munk School of Global Affairs (Asian Institute). She was An Wang Postdoctoral Fellow at the Fairbank Center for Chinese Studies, Harvard University in 2008-09 and received her PhD in political science at Australian National University in 2007. Her theoretical interests are comparative political economy, politics of development, politics of finance & public finance, fiscal federalism, climate change and environmental politics. Her regional interests are primarily China, followed by East and Southeast Asia.