

Mr. Lloyd Gregory Thrall

RAND Corporation

Lloyd Gregory Thrall is a Project Associate with the RAND Corporation, where he focuses on maritime economic and security issues in East Asia. In particular, his research and intelligence community service has focused on natural resource security, sea lane security, naval modernization, and Chinese energy security policymaking.

Mr. Thrall holds an MA with highest honors from the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS) at the University of London, where he studied the relationship between China's national oil companies and central government and conducted research for the Royal United Services Institute (RUSI). He subsequently served in the intelligence community, with the Office of Naval Intelligence and Defense Intelligence Agency, focusing primarily on offshore energy, strategic sea lanes, and naval modernization in Asia. While at RAND, Mr. Thrall has researched a range of China-related issues: the role of offshore resources in Beijing's strategic calculus; China's vulnerability to maritime blockade; China's rare earths exports; Sino-African political and commercial relations; and the effects Sino-American conflict on regional economies and sea lanes. Prior to university, Mr. Thrall served in Special Operations Command as a light infantryman with the 1st Ranger Battalion.