

Dr. Karl Jackson

Professor of Southeast Asia Studies
Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies

Dr. Jackson is professor of Southeast Asia Studies at Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies. Prior to this, he taught political science at the University of California, Berkeley and served as an adviser to the president of the World Bank, an executive vice president at the International Finance Corporation, the president of the U.S.-Thailand Business Council, a national security adviser to the vice president of the United States, senior director for Asia on the National Security Council, U.S. deputy assistant secretary of defense for East Asia and the Pacific, and special assistant to the President of the United States.

Dr. Jackson is the author of Cambodia 1975–1978 (Princeton University Press, 1989) and coauthored Incomplete Democracies in the Asia-Pacific: Evidence from Indonesia, Korea, the Philippines and Thailand (Palgrave, 2014). He has testified to Congress on U.S. policy in Burma (2012) and political conditions in Thailand (2010) and has published several papers on democracy in Southeast Asia. He earned a doctorate from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. Jackson testified before the Commission at its 2006 hearing on “China’s Role in the World.”