

Professor Paul Saulski

Adjunct Professor of Law, Georgetown University Law Center
Senior Counsel, Office of International Affairs, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission

Professor Saulski is a Senior Counsel in the Office of International Affairs at the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission where his duties include advising and assisting the Commission and staff in the areas of international regulatory policy, comparative financial regulation and cross-border enforcement and investigations, particularly in relation to the East Asia region. He also takes part in the SEC's technical assistance program for emerging market regulators. Professor Saulski has recently returned to the SEC from a half-year detail to the U.S. Senate Banking Committee where he served as a senior policy advisor on issues of U.S. and international financial markets reform to the Banking Committee's Subcommittee on Securities, Insurance and Investment.

Professor Saulski began his legal career in the Tokyo office of White & Case, LLP where he specialized in cross-border securities transactions, M&A and the establishment of hedge funds. Professor Saulski's graduate studies focused on the development of China and Japan's financial markets. He studied and conducted research as an academic fellow at Beijing University in Mainland China, the National Taiwan Normal University in Taiwan, and Tsukuba University in Japan. Professor Saulski holds a J.D. and a master's degree in East Asian studies from Washington University in St. Louis and a B.A. from Eastern Michigan University.

As an adjunct professor at the Georgetown Law Center, Professor Saulski teaches courses on international securities regulation and on China's financial markets. Professor Saulski's current research focuses on the development and reform of China's capital markets and its impact on the governance of Chinese companies. He has given lectures on China's financial markets at numerous schools including University of Maryland's Smith School of Business, The American University, the George Washington University Law School, the U.S. Army War College and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces. He has also participated as an expert in the 2006-2009 debate series on "Reframing China Policy" held by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.
