

WRITTEN TESTIMONY CONTRIBUTOR

Dr. Roger Bate, Visiting Fellow, American Enterprise Institute

Roger Bate is an economist who researches international health policy, with a particular focus on tropical disease and substandard and counterfeit medicines at American Enterprise Institute. He also writes on general development policy in Asia and Africa. He writes regularly for AEI's Health Policy Outlook. He is currently a board member and director of Africa Fighting Malaria (United States and South Africa), and a fellow at the Institute of Economic Affairs. He has published widely on the dangers of drugs, including his 2012 book Phake: The Deadly World of Falsified and Substandard Medicines. He founded the website www.searchingforsafety.com, a site that compiles data and comments on the latest findings on drug quality.

Dr. Bate earned a Ph.D. in economics and an MPhil. in land economy from the University of Cambridge, an MSc. in environmental and resource management from University College, London University, and a B.A. in economics from Thames Valley University.