

Thilo Hanemann, Research Director, Rhodium Group

Thilo Hanemann is research director at RHG and leads the firm's cross-border investment work. He coordinates RHG's research assets across different practice areas and supports the investment management, strategic planning and policy analysis requirements of RHG clients within his fields of expertise.

Mr. Hanemann's work on cross-border investment assesses the rise of China, India and other emerging markets as global investors and the implications for direct investment flows, the allocation of portfolio investment, and global competitiveness. Mr. Hanemann and his team analyze new trends in global capital flows, related policy developments and specific transactions involving emerging market players. One of his areas of expertise is the evolution of China's outward foreign direct investment (OFDI) and the economic and policy implications from this new trend.

Thilo Hanemann is a frequent commentator on emerging markets outward investment. His research has been featured in the Financial Times, the Wall Street Journal, the New York Times, and other national media. Mr. Hanemann has published numerous studies on the topic, among them two major reports on Chinese investment in the US –An American Open Door? Maximizing the Benefits of Chinese FDI in the United States (2011) —and Europe –China Invests in Europe. Patterns, Impacts and Policy Implications (2012).

Before joining RHG, Mr. Hanemann worked in academia and the public sector in Europe, China and the United States. He was educated at Free University Berlin, Nanjing University, and Columbia University in New York. He was awarded scholarships by the German National Academic Foundation, the Krupp Foundation and the German American Fulbright Commission.
