

Dr. Yanzhong Huang, Senior Fellow for Global Health Policy, Council on Foreign Relations

Yanzhong Huang is a senior fellow for global health at the Council on Foreign Relations, where he examines issues of emerging powers, global health governance, health-related development assistance, and universal health coverage. He is also an associate professor and director of the Center for Global Health Studies at the School of Diplomacy and International Relations at Seton Hall University, where he developed the first academic concentration among U.S. professional schools of international affairs that explicitly addresses the security and foreign policy aspects of health issues. He is the founding editor of Global Health Governance: The Scholarly Journal for the New Health Security Paradigm.

Huang has written extensively on global health governance, health diplomacy and health security, and public health in China and East Asia. He has published numerous reports, journal articles, and book chapters, including articles in Survival, Foreign Affairs, Bioterrorism and Biosecurity, and Journal of Contemporary China, as well as op-ed pieces in New York Times, International Herald Tribune, The Lancet, and South China Morning Post, among others. In 2006, he coauthored the first scholarly article that systematically examines China's soft power. His latest book, Governing Health in Contemporary China, looks at the health care reform, government ability to address disease outbreaks, and food and drug safety in China.

He is frequently consulted by major media outlets, the private sector, and governmental and non-governmental organizations on global health issues and China. In 2012, he was listed by InsideJersey as one of the "20 Brainiest People in New Jersey." He was a research associate of the National Asia Research Program, a public intellectuals fellow of the National Committee on U.S.-China Relations, an associate fellow of Asia Society, a visiting senior research fellow at the National University of Singapore, and a visiting fellow at the Center for Strategic and International Studies. He has taught at Barnard College and Columbia University. He obtained his BA and MA degrees from Fudan University and PhD degree from the University of Chicago.